

TERRIBLE SCENES FOLLOW REBEL VICTORY AT OJINAGA

Nearly Five Thousand Federal Soldiers and Civilians Cross Border and Surrender to United States Border Patrol—Food and Shelter Scant—Many Wounded Suffer Tortures.

PRESIDIO, Texas, January 12.—(By Associated Press Cable)—Terrible scenes are taking place here and Major McNamee, U.S.A., and his five hundred troops, who have been guarding the United States border are facing a serious problem with nearly five thousand Mexican federal troops, civilians, including men, women and children, to care for and scant food supplies.

Following the victorious assault by the rebels on Saturday under General Villa, 2800 federal troops, out of the 4500 which were quartered in Ojinaga, across the Rio Grande River, and 1500 civilians, who feared for their lives at the hands of the rebels, came over the border and surrendered to the United States authorities here. Among those who surrendered are six federal generals.

Little Food and Scant Shelter.
The prisoners are now in custody of the border patrol in command of Major McNamee, but the suffering is intense, as there is little food and scant shelter for the thousands of fugitives, and relief is anxiously awaited from other points.

The battleground across the river, which at this point is a shallow sheet of muddy water, hardly waist deep, with long stretches of soft mud along the banks, is littered with relics of the desperate fighting which has been in progress for so many days, with dead bodies in all directions.

Messengers from the American Red Cross Society, who are in the recent fighting zone, are often compelled to trace the wounded of both sides by listening for their groans in the hidden trenches of the riflemen along the river's edge.

Terrible Scenes of Suffering.

Almost continually ragged figures of smoke-begrimed, maimed and half-naked soldiers are seen crawling toward the muddy water to quench their agony of thirst. Occasionally a group, crying out from the pain of their wounds, rush pell-mell down the bank, others crawl over the rocks and cacti with shattered limbs, seeking safety across the border, or drag themselves to pools of water and collapse.

The little mission church in this town has been turned into a hospital, above which flies the flag of the American Red Cross Society, which, with its limited means, is doing everything possible to succor the wounded and sick which have suddenly flooded this side of the boundary.

EL PASO, Texas, January 12.—(By Associated Press Cable)—More trouble was started yesterday at Naco, Arizona, when Mexican rebels shot and seriously wounded Private Bryce and Trumpeter Warren, of the Tenth Cavalry, while patrolling the border.

It is stated that Private Bryce was on the boundary line when he was wounded and that the rebels fired across the border, wounding Warren. The rebels are asserted to have dragged Warren across to their side of the line, and when three soldiers of the Tenth Cavalry, taking their lives in their hands, made a dash to the assistance of Bryce, who was lying on the border line seriously wounded, they were arrested by the rebel soldiers.

As soon as the news of what had happened reached Captain Tompkins, in command of the border patrol at Naco, he sent a peremptory demand to the rebels to immediately return his men and the soldiers captured were at once released and escorted to the United States side of the border.

Dispatches received in this city state that considerable excitement prevails in Naco and threats are freely made as to what will be done to the rebels should they repeat the offense. An investigation will be made of the circumstances leading up to the shooting.

Tries to Induce Immigrant to Return in Honolulu and Clash with Officers Follows.

(From Monday Advertiser.)

Because Jose Makawa, a Filipino, tried to do a little promotion work on his own hook, by trying to induce one of the Filipino women to stop over in Honolulu rather than to proceed to one of the other Islands and engage in plantation work, Makawa is in jail. Makawa is in the Queen's Hospital with a fractured scalp. Makawa was arrested yesterday.

About 200 Filipinos were landed from the Chio Maru on Saturday night and were taken to the immigration station in Kakaako yesterday morning.

It is claimed by the police that Makawa enticed one of the Filipino women to come outside of the enclosure and was in the act of persuading her to accompany him when he was ordered away from the premises by Special Officer L. E. Williams.

Makawa, it is claimed by the police, refused to leave and when Williams put a little more force into his argument, a general fight started and Williams was getting decidedly the worst of it when reinforcements arrived from the police station in command of Captain Kahangmoku.

During the melee it is claimed that Mariano Legaspo had his skull laid open by coming in contact with a section of scanting wielded by Officer Williams. Legaspo's wound, though painful is not serious as he was patched up shortly afterwards at the Queen's Hospital.

Joe Benn passed away yesterday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Isaac M. Cox at Kaimuki in his eighty-ninth year. He was one of the most widely known ministers of the gospel and had devoted his life to this service in the Friend's church, commonly called Quakers. He was born in New Hampshire and spent the later years of his active life in California, residing at San Jose.

He was a close friend and a co-worker with the poet Whitier, and prided among his many literary collections original manuscripts from the pen of the Quaker poet.

He had traveled extensively and had friends in all parts of the world. Recently he had made his home with his daughter here, where he was overtaken with the final summons.

REBELS CUT COAST LINE

Nelson O'Shaughnessy, Representative in Mexico of the United States, Marooned at Wayside Station on Way to Vera Cruz—British Minister Takes Prompt Action.

CITY OF MEXICO, January 12.—(By Associated Press Cable)—United States Charge d'Affaires Nelson O'Shaughnessy, who has been in charge of the American legation in the capital of Mexico since the resignation of Ambassador Wilson, is marooned at a little wayside station on the line of the Vera Cruz & Mexico Railway.

NELSON O'SHAUGHNESSY, United States Charge d'Affaires in Mexico, whose journey to Vera Cruz has been interrupted by rebels.

Rebel raiders, it is reported, have endangered the main outlet from the City of Mexico to the coast and interrupted all traffic for the time being, with the result that Mr. O'Shaughnessy and many others are being guarded at the station where the Vera Cruz train is held up.

The news of the stoppage of traffic on the Vera Cruz line created a sensation in this city, and orders have been given to send a special train, heavily guarded by federal soldiers, to the relief of the passengers at the scene of the interruption of traffic.

The British minister to Mexico, Sir Lionel Curzon, took action immediately upon learning of the situation on the railway, and made strong representations to President Huerta that better policing of the Vera Cruz railway was an absolute necessity, reiterating that this line must be kept open and in running order at all hazards.

Continued Sickness Believed to Have Prompted N. Tahara to Attempt Suicide.

(From Monday Advertiser.)

Dependancy, caused by a long period of illness, is the reason given by relatives and friends why N. Tahara, a Japanese fifty-nine years of age, attempted to end his life yesterday at four-thirty o'clock by cutting his throat with a razor.

Tahara lives with his wife and family at Vineyard street and, Cunia lane. Shortly after four o'clock yesterday afternoon Tahara was in the front part of the house and though he acted in a despondent manner during the day he showed no intention of attempting to end his life. His wife stated that he suddenly reached for a glass which was on the table and said that he was going to the kitchen to get a drink of water.

A few moments later screams were heard from the kitchen and upon investigation, Tahara was found lying in a pool of blood on the floor with his throat cut from ear to ear. By his side there was a Japanese razor.

The police were notified and upon investigation by Officer Kawahara, the injured man was sent to the Queen's Hospital.

Relatives and friends of Tahara said that he had always lived happily with his family and had no business worries. It is thought that his mind became deranged through having experienced a long period of illness.

The authorities at the Queen's Hospital stated last night that there was a chance of saving the man's life if other complications do not set in.

CONDUCTOR JERKED FROM MOVING TRAIN BY LOW-HUNG PHONE WIRE

SCHOFIELD BARRACKS, January 10.—Poor judgment, amounting almost to criminal carelessness on the part of a line man stringing a telephone wire across the O. R. & L. tracks near the Dowett Station at Jones Ranch on the Lelehu Branch, came perilously near causing the death of a well-known employee of the railway company this morning.

The wire was strung across the track at a height that would clear the top of a car about four feet, and no notice of this had been given the railway company. About half-past ten o'clock the Lelehu local freight was coming up the grade, going probably ten or twelve miles an hour. The conductor, Tom French, was standing on top of one of the cars near the middle of the train, when this unexpected obstruction caught him under the chin and hurled him down between the car and the track, and the following car. He was observed to roll along the top of the car and fall and the train was brought to a quick stop, and

CONGRESS IS READY TO ACT

Starts Upon the Second Stage of Its Long Session with Plans for Far Reaching Legislation Affecting All Parts of the Country, Including Hawaii and Alaska.

WASHINGTON, January 12.—(By Associated Press Cable)—Congress begins its long session this morning, starting upon its second stage of work with the calendars of both houses crowded with proposed legislation of a far reaching character.

Among the special subjects which congress is scheduled to consider at this session are included trust regulation, the woman suffrage amendment, the amendments for the restrictions of the sale and manufacture of liquors, the bill providing for prohibition in the Territory of Hawaii, Michigan and Colorado mining troubles and the question of government railroads in Alaska.

Of all legislation which especially affects Hawaii, that which is expected in regard to the bill providing for the regulation of interstate commerce in liquors and the prohibition of their sale in the Territory, is of particular interest at this time, and it is asserted that it will be acted upon irrespective of the negative vote taken in the Territory in 1910.

President Wilson is expected in Washington today and there is a mass of business pertaining to the opening session of congress awaiting his consideration. Among this it is believed are a number of important appointments which will be sent to the senate at once.

Smith Had Little Trouble Finding Spot to Land Knockout in Bout with Champion.

Gunboat Smith is America's best of the heavyweight brigade of pugilism, says Harry B. Smith, in describing the outcome of the recent Smith-Pelkey boxing match at San Francisco. With a powerful right cross to the jaw—one of fifty that he had attempted to land—he knocked Arthur Pelkey down to the fifteenth round of their championship fight at Daly City and when the dazed man summoned his faculties for the count of eight and was dazed across, a crushing left to the back of his head toppled him over again. This time Pelkey was stretched full length on the canvas. He rolled over as his fate was being told, and was finally resting with one knee on the canvas when Referee Jim Griffin had counted him out. In any event, the referee would have awarded the palm to Smith, for Pelkey was unconscious and in no condition to proceed.

It was dazed as he was helped to his corner, and had but little to say as he was assisted from the ring and into his dressing-room.

It was the finale of a fight in which from the sixth round on there was little or no question as to the winner. Pelkey's vaunted ability was wholly lacking, and even the form of his gymnasium workouts was not displayed in any instance. Slow and without a guard that would be worthy of his name, he was beaten down with body punches from the eighth on to the final, until he was so tired and slow that Smith found his mark for the dreaded right and delivered the goods.

DEFER RETIREMENT OF MAJOR-GENERAL BIDDLE

Marine officers here confirm the report that the application of Major General Biddle, commandant of the Marine Corps, for retirement after thirty years' service, has been deferred by the secretary of the navy pending the consideration by congress of a bill making the tenure of the office of four years instead of until death or retirement. The navy department has sent to the naval affairs committee a draft of a bill which provides that any commandant retired from active service on account of age while holding that position shall enjoy the rank and pay of a retired major general, while any officer placed on the retired list for other reasons while holding the office of commandant shall revert to his former grade.

Any officer serving as commandant would be carried as an additional number in his grade while so serving, and also after his return to duty in his grade until it is reduced to the number required by law. There is, however, nothing in the bill to prevent the President from naming the commandant of the Marine Corps to succeed himself should he desire.

The bill passed the senate December 12 and is now waiting the action of the house after the holiday recess.

Shanghai Editor Murdered; Assassin Gives No Reason

SHANGHAI, China, January 12.—(By Associated Press Cable)—Both the foreign and Chinese communities of this city were greatly shocked yesterday by the sensational murder of Mr. How, the founder, editor and managing director of the Commercial Press of this city.

Editor How, while in his office, was shot and almost instantly killed. The assassin was given at once and the assassin was captured and, after a fight, locked up in the prison in the Chinese quarter.

It is believed that the murder is the result of the strong stand which Editor How took in urging the local municipal court to take over the control of the Chapi suburbs, during the operations of the rebels in this vicinity last July.

The prisoner refuses to make any statement as to the cause which led him to shoot Mr. How, who was generally respected by all.

Legislation Held Responsible for Hard Times—Tariff Revision Needed.

By Ernest G. Walker.

(Mail Special to The Advertiser.)

WASHINGTON, December 25.—The administration has not begun yet to move for the primary legislation which President Wilson recommended. But leaders of the party will probably move before long. An effort will undoubtedly be made to amend the legislation at the present session of congress. This far, however, attention has been much centered upon the Currency Bill. The President has given little attention to other matters of legislation. However, with the completion of the currency law, he will be free to take up other matters of legislation as soon as he has returned from his vacation on the Gulf coast of Mississippi.

One can see that the Republicans are actively laying foundations for their Congressional campaign. Representative Mann, the minority leader of the house, recently stood forth with a vigorous criticism of the administration. He asserted that the country was already in the midst of a financial and industrial crisis. He attributed this to Democratic legislation and cited the many thousands of men out of employment already forming in the cities. He drew the fire of Speaker Clark, who said there was not a syllable of truth in the Republican charges. There were always unemployed in the large cities and the usual quota this winter was being utilized by the Republicans as an argument against the administration.

This aspect has been emphasized by Republicans in the senate as well as in the house. When the Currency Bill was in its last stages Senator Gallinger of New Hampshire alluded to increasing distress among the laboring men of the country and ascribed it to Democratic enactments. He predicted that no adequate relief would come till there had been another revision of the tariff, and by the Republican party. There has been an emphasis of this idea all down the line, and the Congressional Record has many speeches going into the case in much detail. It is plain that unless the times are better the Democratic campaign, much handicapped. They must answer these criticisms to the satisfaction of the workingman, which may not be an altogether easy thing to do.

There was eagerness for signs at the national committee meeting of more harmony between the Progressives and the Republicans. These were not particularly apparent, however, although the reports continue from many quarters that the number of Progressives is steadily dwindling. There is an element among the Progressives that has been very diligent alike at organizing for next year and for 1916 and in repudiating any advances from the Republicans. Concessions about the basis of representation will naturally win over many Progressives, but probably not those who are now so aggressively seeking to strengthen the Progressive organization and trying to preserve and strengthen the Progressive party entity.

Just for the present much of the struggle centers over whether the Republicans shall go to the Progressives or the Progressives go to the Republicans. The national committee meeting indicated that the Republicans are taking no steps to move into the Progressive camp. They are trying to make the situation so attractive that Progressives shall come over to them. In this way they are undoubtedly making some progress. When Colonel Roosevelt returns there will be something doing in that connection presumably. He is expected to begin maneuvering for the Republican nomination in 1916 as an adjunct to the Progressive nomination. That will be something for the voters and the politicians to talk about in the winter.

Artist Earhart Here Painting Views to Be Used in Hawaii's Exposition Building.

Rapid progress is being made by the Hawaii World's Fair Commission in preparing the diorama for the Hawaii Building at the 1915 Exposition.

Artist K. H. Earhart, who is an expert in the line of work, leaves today for Lahaina where a series of pictures will be painted showing that picturesque village with the Pioneer Plantation as a background. It is Mr. Earhart's idea to make a composite picture of plantation life in the Hawaiian Islands by painting Lahaina in the foreground and then sections of the Hawaiian Commercial Company's plantation will be included in the picture with the idea of giving as complete a picture of the sugar industry as possible.

Mr. Earhart has already completed sketches of Waikiki beach, Honolulu, from off shore; Iao Valley, Maui, together with Hilo from Coconut Island. These sketches are made on a small scale, showing the general view and color scheme. They are to be submitted finally to the World's Fair Commission for selection.

The diorama when completed will be so constructed that as one gazes out of a window, the entire picture of Hawaii's beauty is before the eye. The paintings will be fifty feet long by twenty feet high and will be arranged in the form of a semi-circle. In the foreground will be models of plantations and other industries of the Islands and the background will be composed of the paintings Mr. Earhart is now preparing.

Aside from the work that the artist is doing for the commission he also has private contracts with several of the large firms here to prepare paintings which will show their features of Hawaii; such as the coffee, tobacco and pineapple industries. Mr. Earhart has had considerable experience in this line of work, having been connected with several large exhibitions on the mainland. He is making the models for the exposition at the Hawaiian Sugar Planters' Experimental Station in Honolulu.

Eben How's Gasoline Schooner Loses Rudder Off Kaneohe—Towed Into Port.

(From Monday Advertiser.)

With rudder gone and mountains seas forcing his boat ashore on the windward side of Oahu, Captain Wm. J. Weisbarth with his gasoline schooner Mokoli, and crew were miraculously saved from drowning when off Kaneohe Friday afternoon by the prompt decision and quick orders telephoned from Honolulu by Eben How, manager of the Oahu Shipping Company to a boat of the same name at Heala to go to the rescue of the distressed Mokoli.

Watchers from the shore had seen the Mokoli successfully pass the bar at Kaneohe into deep water where the waves were mountainous. They had seen that the boat had met with an accident of some kind and as they believed, was on the rocks. They telephoned to Eben How stating that his steamer had been in its perilous position for two hours. Low quickly reacted that a vessel on the rocks in that storm could not hold together for more than twenty minutes and instantly got in touch with a sister ship at Heala, ordering it to go at once to the rescue of the Mokoli.

The Mokoli had lost its rudder immediately after passing the bar and had drifted helplessly while Captain Weisbarth busied himself in devising means to save his ship. Having no timber on board with which to make a jury rudder, he ordered all the canvas available to be hoisted, thinking that he might be able to guide the boat with sail. This proved unsuccessful owing to the enormous seas that pounded the disabled ship and threatened to carry it in shore and on to the rocks. Finding no other way to avert impending doom, both anchors were ordered lowered, which after dragging for some distance, finally held the boat against the tremendous impact of the seas.

With the arrival of the succoring boat, a tow line was passed aboard the Mokoli and the two again safely crossed the bar into the more peaceful waters of Kaneohe port.

After the storm subsided, the Mokoli was taken in tow by the Keana and brought to Honolulu yesterday morning.

The big oil tank used by the company in carrying fuel oil to different parts on Oahu was hung on behind the rudderless Mokoli and when the Keana, the Mokoli and the big oil tank appeared in Honolulu harbor in tandem style there were scores of surmises as to what the unusual line up could mean.

WHY KEALOHA SUITS WERE DISMISSED

Judge Wise in Dismissing Five Civil Actions Brought Against Hilo Supervisor Says Fault Lies with Those Who Filed the Proceedings and Not with Deputy County Attorney Heen.

(Mail Special to The Advertiser.)

HILO, January 10.—The non-appearance of Prosecutor Breckons or of assistance from him led last Thursday to the dismissal of the five civil suits brought by Breckons for the county against Supervisor John Kealoa for the recovery of various sums which the county was alleged to have lost through Kealoa.

While Deputy County Attorney Heen appeared for the prosecution, he was unable to go to trial, as Breckons had sent him neither papers nor data, and the only work he got was a request from the attorney general that he have the cases continued again. But the court had to be reckoned with, and Judge Wise not only refused to allow any more continuances, but expressed in very caustic language his opinion of the way in which the matter had been conducted by the prosecutor.

The Kealoa cases were called on Wednesday morning, when Heen made his first request for a continuance. "As Mr. Heen is now appearing in the place of our friend, the late lamented Mr. Breckons, we are willing that the cases be continued until tomorrow," he said. This was done.

When the cases were called the following morning, McBride moved that the whole bunch be dismissed on account of want of prosecution.

Heen again fought for a continuance. He stated that he had not had time to prepare since the attorney general had asked him to take charge of the cases a few days ago.

"These cases have already been continued time and time again," said McBride. "We have allowed this many times now, and have shown every courtesy, but this is getting too much."

"Is there any information which you need from Mr. Breckons?" asked the court.

"Yes," answered Heen. "He has all the papers and also important memoranda and data concerning them."

"It seems to me that these people should understand, when they asked you to handle the cases, that you would need that information. I don't see why the defendant should be prejudiced by such actions."

"Well, if the cases are dismissed the blame should be placed on me," said Heen. "We cannot be held responsible, certainly."

"No, that is true," admitted McBride. "These cases were started six weeks ago, and I can say without fear of contradiction, now or later on, that there is no good faith in these cases. As a matter of fact, Breckons told me himself that he brought these cases only for the purpose of furnishing a basis for the mandamus cases. If the attorney general wanted Heen to prosecute, he should have given him the papers. Heen is not to blame; he is the legatee of a lot of tam cases."

"A continuance of half an hour was allowed in order that Heen might ascertain whether that moving mail had brought the much needed data from Honolulu. It brought a letter from the attorney general, but there was no appearance of the papers. Thayer told Heen to have the cases continued."

"I suppose that we will have to do it, if we are so ordered by the attorney general," sneered McBride.

"I move for a continuance," said Heen. "I can't do anything else under the circumstances."

"We object to any more continuances," declared McBride. "We have allowed these cases to be continued for many weeks, and we have taken no opportunity of the occasions when there was no one in court at all to represent the prosecution, and when we might well have moved for the dismissal of the cases. It is about time these cases were dismissed."

"The court takes the same view," said Judge Wise. "I think that the people who brought lawsuits in the beginning of December and had people employ counsel and appear in court time after time are at fault. Mr. McBride has certainly shown the prosecution every courtesy. I can see very well how under these circumstances Mr. Heen cannot prepare to handle the cases. The fault lies with the people who brought them in the first place, and the cases are dismissed."
